

Psalm 31

Early Christians found in Psalm 31 the story of Jesus' Passion foreshadowed.

Actually Jesus quotes Psalm 31 when he dies – at least in the Gospel of Luke:

Youth Bulletin

Palm Sunday / Passion Sunday March 29, 2026

On this Sunday we remember the last days of Jesus' life, from his triumphant reception by the people of Jerusalem to his death on the cross when everybody has turned their backs on him.

Today's lessons:

- Matthew 21:1-11 In the Processional Gospel we reenact how the people celebrated Jesus when he came to Jerusalem. Playing the people of Jerusalem poses the question: will we also act like them when it comes to the crucifixion?
- Isaiah 50:4-9a The Servant of the Lord, sent to teach the people about God, comes to grips with the fact that his mission seems to have little success and people abuse him instead. But he knows he's doing God's work and it's all up to God.
- Psalm 31:9-16 Left alone by neighbours and friends and his life threatened, the person in this psalm wonders whether his life has any meaning. This resembles closely Jesus' own fate.
- Philippians 2:5-11 Paul uses an early Christian hymn, describing Christ's way from Heaven to the cross and back again. Only because Christ did not insist on any privileges God made him the ruler of all.
- Matthew 26:14-27:66 Like all of the four gospels, Matthew culminates in the account of the Passion of Jesus Christ; this is what the life of Jesus leads to and what it aimed at from the beginning, the fulfilment of his mission.

The Servant of the Lord

Our Old Testament Lesson today is the third of four 'songs' in the book of Isaiah describing the fate of someone called 'the servant of the Lord' from different perspectives: Isaiah 42:1-9 (God's plan) and Isaiah 49:1-7 (the Servant's perspective) were lessons in the Epiphany season, and Isaiah 52:13—53:12 (the view of the people) will be read on Good Friday.

The Most Faithful Disciple

Peter seemed pretty sure of himself, when Jesus announced that all the disciples would leave him.

But Jesus gives Peter a warning. Do you get it?
